LDC & CNBC

Empowering On-Air Impact with New Mainstream Business Experts
September 26, 2018

The Latino Donor Collaborative was well represented at CNBC Headquarters in New Jersey on September 26, 2018 by some of our strong and knowledgeable members Gary Acosta, Co-Founder & CEO, NAHREP, Patty Arvielo, President of New American Funding, Vincent Cordero, Co-Founder & CEO, One Road Media Ventures, Miriam Rivera, Co-founder & Managing Director, Ulu Ventures, Herb Scannell, Former CEO, mitú, and Tom Soto, Founder & Managing Partner, DCIF and Ana Valdez, Executive Director, Latino Donor Collaborative.

Produced by Mary Duffy, Vice President, Talent Development & Senior Executive Producer and moderated by Bertha Coombs, Nasdaq & Health Care Reporter of CNBC, this event is aimed to increase Latino representation on the air is with CNBC. Our speakers were selected to be potential on-air guests, where they will be occasionally invited to comment and share their powerful insight on specific financial news.

The LDC proudly connected great finance professionals with CNBC, as our mission is to create a realistic image of who Latinos are. One way to accomplish this mission is to increase Latino voices and faces on the air, with wise and experienced professional point of views.
